Mapping out a thriving culture for London

Cultural prosperity.

Sneak peek at community-guided plan shows strong focus on London economy

ANGELA
MULLINS

angela.mullins@metronews.ca

London's cultural prosperity plan will be more than a guide to developing museums, arts galleries and heritage sites.

It's also about the economy, and making sure talented young Londoners can find work in the arts or related fields.

Culture is "not just entertainment," said Robin Armistead, the city's manager of culture.

"We believe that you need a cultural strategy to be part of your economic prosperity," she said. "When you look at jobs, you have to look at jobs on a sector-by-sector basis. It's a balanced approach."

Key areas

Highlights of London's proposed cultural plan are expected to be available soon at London.ca.

- The plan's four key areas are:
 - Strengthening culture to build economic prosperity;
 - Supporting cultural programming;
 - Leveraging cultural assets;
 - Celebrating and promoting culture.

London's cultural sector directly employs 6,200 workers and is indirectly responsible for 2,300 additional jobs, officials say.

Ways to build on that — whether it's through a suggested business-mentorship program for cultural entrepreneurs or helping people get grants — have been identified as the first of four "strategic directions" guiding the culture road map.

Highlights of the various strategies were rolled out during a Thursday "cultural mixer" that served as the public's first inside look at the plan. It was also the last chance for people to give input before a draft plan is tabled to city councillors in January.

Several Londoners think the city's cultural focus is on the right track.

"Attracting culture to your city is critical to attracting youth to your city and retaining youth," said Jeremy Bird, 37.

"If you don't have young people, your city gets old and dies."

In many ways, the plan has been written by people with an interest in its success, Armistead said.

Hundreds of people have given feedback during workshops and planning sessions organized since April. About 70 people attended Thursday's event at the London Convention Centre.

"This is a community plan," Armistead said. "It's not just what city hall thinks."

City's sixth homicide. Police arrest a 17-year-old male, not looking for other suspects

Residents of a north London apartment building awoke Thursday morning to a crime scene on their doorstep.

Anthony Crone, 24, of London, was found dead at 1162 Adelaide St. N. late Wednesday night.

A 17-year-old male has been charged with second-degree murder. His name cannot be released under the Youth Criminal Justice Act.

Crone was stabbed just after 10 p.m. Wednesday night outside an apartment complex on Adelaide near Kipps Lane, and staggered to the parking lot of a nearby Hasty Market, located at 1162 Adelaide, where police and paramedics found him.

Crone was rushed to London Health Sciences Centre, but pronounced dead shortly after arriving at the hospital.

The suspect was arrested without incident at around 4:40 a.m. on Thursday. Police said they are not looking for any other suspects.

According to police, the victim had been involved in an "altercation" with another man, and that the two knew each other.

"We are still talking to people, trying to figure out all the details," said Const. Will Knelson. "We don't want to release any details that we won't be able to confirm at this time."

A woman who lives near the scene told AM980 she's frustrated with the amount of crime in the area.

"Unbelievable, there's stabbings, shootings, drugs all over the place here," said Jessica, who did not provide her last name. "Something needs to be done."

As of late Thursday afternoon, the weapon used in the killing had not been recovered.

Police remained at the scene for all of Thursday morning and afternoon, blocking off most of Hasty Market's property with caution tape. Pockets of the neighbouring apartment building's parking lot were also taped off as the investigation continued.

'Structural' issue

Guy Lombardo Bridge closed to traffic overnight

The Guy Lombardo Bridge was scheduled to be closed to traffic overnight Thursday as city engineers investigate a possible "structural" issue, London Police say.

The bridge between Springbank Drive and Riverside Drive was initially shut down around 5:45 p.m. on Thursday, and those inside their vehicles at the time were forced by emergency crews to leave them behind.

Several motorists who were on the bridge at the time have told AM980 they were advised by Police that the bridge "may collapse," although city officials have yet to comment on those claims.

Revitalization. Local creek to get help from provincial government Report cards are the bane of some students' existence. A handful of creeks connected to the Thames River feel their pain right now.

"The report card didn't come out too good," said Bud Greene, a member of grassroots environmental group Friends of Medway Creek.

Parts of Medway, which runs through sections of rural London, are on the receiving end of rehabilitation efforts after numerous tests over the past few years revealed its water quality was poor, phosphorus loads too high, and biodiversity suffering.

"It's a long, long-term thing," Greene said. "We worry about getting this stream back into good health. When you look at it as an overall program, you say, 'Oh my God, are we ever going to get this done?' This is a little step."

Ontario Environment Minister Jim Bradley will be in town on Friday to announce an undisclosed donation to aid a creek cleanup drive, officially launching the Medway Creek Buffer Project.

Bud Greene, a member of Friends of Medway Creek, lends a hand to Julie Welker, Medway Creek Buffer Project lead, as she plants the buffer zone's first tree at a rural London farm on Thursday. JOHN MATISZ/METRO

Local students have been invited to help plant trees and shrubs along the creek's edges, with hopes of creating a secure buffer zone. Through buffering, riverbanks gain stabilization and eventually water quality improves over time.

Twenty-eight creeks feed into the Thames River. Its flow is filtered into drinking water after flowing into Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie. JOHN MATISZ/METRO

Backlash. Santa Claus parade marches on despite public criticism

The 56th annual London Santa Claus parade runs this weekend, but organizers say the date of the event has led to several complaints.

Throughout most of its history, the parade has taken place on the second Saturday in November, and this year, that happens to be Nov. 10 — the day before Remembrance Day.

Parade organizers admit they've received several calls, letters and e-mails complaining about the timing from members of the public.

"Unfortunately, because of the logistics of entertainment, it's very hard to change," said Shaun Merton, co-chair of the Santa Claus parade. "A lot of the entertainment is booked more than one year in advance."

The theme of this year's parade was chosen to honour Canadian veterans, and everyone attending is encouraged to wear a poppy. Some veterans will also be taking part as grand marshals.

The parade begins at 6 p.m. Saturday at Egerton Street, and will travel along Dundas Street to Ridout Street. AM980/AM980.CA

Afghan war vet a symbol of resiliency

Remembrance Day. Jody Mitic to speak in London about the realities of battle

JOHN MATISZ
john.matisz@metronews.ca

For nearly six years, Jody Mitic has kept memories from the day his world was turned upside down nestled in a vivid place in his mind.

On Jan. 11, 2007, the Kitchener native, 13 years into a Canadian military career, stepped on a landmine in Afghanistan.

Medics were able to sever his left leg at the calf, saving most of it, and allowing the now 34-year-old to use prosthetic legs.

"We were moving through a farmer's field, and as we left it, we went through a door," said Mitic, describing the exact events. "My point man, as he went through, cleared the doorway. The second guy went through, and (the) third guy went through. I was the last in line. As I stepped through the door, I was fine."

"But, then, as I was catching up to the team, I stepped on the mine."

Amazingly, the two-tour Afghan War sniper did not go unconscious following the blast, despite losing a dangerous amount of blood.

Jody Mitic lost parts of both legs after stepping on a landmine while serving in Afghanistan. CONTRIBUTED

An hour later, an ambulance picked him up. It wasn't until he went into surgery that he was put under.

The pain, Mitic says, was worth it.

"The commander of that armoured ambulance was a cute, blonde medic," he said, with a chuckle. "And she's now the mother of my two beautiful little girls."

Thursday, as part of a Remembrance Day-themed event at the Hilton London, Mitic will speak about restarting his life before hitting 30. His speech includes, but is not limited to, the life-changing experiences of Jan. 11, 2007.

in Brampton, Mitic was fascinated by combat. He enlisted at 17 after biding his time as a reserve a few years earlier.

"The theory is, despite the influence of my mom and my grandma, he was the coolest uncle I had," said Mitic of his Uncle Jim, who served in the Canadian Air Force. "And it just kind of grew from there."

One thing Mitic says he's learned in his post-Afghan life is that time is running out on a lot of Second World War veterans.

The torch needs to be passed on, and the stories of what it's like to be in combat have to continue to be told.

"A lot of guys I know aren't comfortable, willing, or able, to tell their story," he said. "In the Second World War, we were dealing with tens of thousands of soldiers. Now? It's a couple hundred. So we have to do our best to be as loud as we can."

Rogers TV London to air War Amps films

To mark Remembrance Day, Rogers TV will air documentaries from the War Amps' award-winning Military Heritage Series.

The first documentary of the day airs at 6 a.m., the two-hour A War of Their Own (Canadians in Italy). At 8 a.m., it's D-Day: The Story of the Canadian Assault Troops (one hour). This documentary will be rebroadcast at 1 p.m.

Dieppe: Don't Call It a Failure will be shown at 8 p.m., followed by the hour-long In Flanders Fields at 9 p.m.

These documentaries have been distributed to regular, specialty, and community television channels across Canada. They were funded by corporate donations and can be purchased at a cost-recovery price by calling toll-free 1-800-250-3030, or visiting waramps.ca. METRO

Patterson likely to carry load over weekend for Knights

Stepping up.

Hot goaltender will be counted on, along with versatile forward Bo Horvat

JOHN MATISZ

john.matisz@metronews.ca

Unlike teammates Nikita Zadorov, Max Domi, Seth Griffith and Scott Harrington, London Knights forward Bo Horvat won't be forced to pace himself this weekend.

The powerful and versatile sophomore was not selected to Team OHL's roster for either of its two games (Thursday in Guelph, Monday in Sarnia) versus Team Russia in the middle leg of the Canada-Russia Super Series.

"It doesn't matter to me," said Horvat, downplaying the snub. "I'm happy for the guys who got chosen. It's a great honour for them."

Another Knight, Ryan Rupert, was picked to represent the league. But he sustained a shoulder injury recently and is on the shelf for three to five more weeks.

Although he skated on Thursday — albeit without full equipment — it seems Rupert's ailment will get in the way of him appearing in the Super Series.

Horvat, 17, would be a top fill-in candidate. For now, though, his mind is focused on a back-to-back-to-back weekend for London.

Just seven games ago, the Rodney native notched his first multi-goal game in the OHL against London's opponent this Saturday, the Plymouth Whalers.

Between the pipes, the 10-5-0-2 Knights plan on riding the hot hand. London goalie coach Bill Dark says Jake Patterson will get the start against Sudbury on Friday, with Kevin Baillie stepping in the next night.

"I think it would probably be safe to say if Patterson wins, he'll be back in the net on Sunday," Dark said.

The hot hand: Josh Leivo (10 goals, 10 assists)

Of note: The Wolves have lost four of their past five games, and own one of the worst penalty killing units in the league. London should pounce on their vulnerability.

Versus: Plymouth Whalers

The hot hand: Rickard Rakell (8 goals, 8 assists)

Of note: Facing the rough-

Budweiser Gardens

place, Patterson will face his hometown squad, the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds, and local product Jared McCann, in the weekend finisher.

"I wouldn't say there's more pressure to perform at home, but I'm really motivated. I'm really excited," said McCann, a 16-year-old who played for the London Jr.

Knights growing up.

Knights assistant GM Rob Simpson was McCann's head coach last season. He says the fourth-overall pick this year shouldn't expect special treatment during his first trip to Budweiser Gardens.

"I don't think we'll isolate one guy, but maybe a whole line," Simpson said.

Canadians are road-ragers: Poll

Known for being polite, Canadians might be anything but that behind the wheel, a new study suggests.

Almost 40 per cent of people surveyed say they've uttered curse words because of traffic delays, and 21 per cent admit to yelling at another driver.

Another 19 per cent have displayed "hostile hand gestures" toward others while on the road, according to the poll by Kanetix.ca, a website for car insurance quotes.

The biggest trigger of all that rage? Distracted drivers, nearly half of the 1,400 survey respondents said.

Getting cut off comes in second with 44 per cent of people saying that's most likely to get their blood boiling.

London police Sgt. Ryan Scrivens offered some advice to all those hot-under-the-collar drivers. "Just try and remain calm," said Scrivens, who works in the traffic management unit.

If you see someone texting, talking on their cellphone, fixing their hair, or simply weaving in and out of traffic, take a deep breath, don't retaliate and call police later.

Dial 911, Scrivens said, if the person's behaviour is an immediate threat.

If it's not, get a description of the vehicle, a licence-plate number if possible, and note where the incident happened when you tell the police.

Officers often can find the driver and at least confront them about their behaviour. In some cases, citations can be issued after the fact, Scrivens said. ANGELA MULLINS/METRO

The survey

- 83 per cent of men and 76 per cent of women nationwide admit to exhibiting behaviour that could be considered road rage
- 28 per cent of drivers 18 to 44 years old admit to yelling or using profanity, compared to 12 per cent of older drivers

Newfound freedom.

Veteran recalls excitement of being on forefront of emerging female workforce and military service

ROSANNA HAROUTOUNIAN
For Metro

Second World War veteran Helen Rapp said she doesn't want young Canadians to forget the women who served in war.

"We opened the door for women who are in the military now," she said. "That is what we're really very proud of."

In 1941, Rapp left her hometown of Schumacher, Ont., to work in a munitions factory in Hamilton.

"There was a catch, though," said Rapp. "I couldn't go without my mother because I was only 15." Her mother worked in the cafeteria, while Rapp helped make barrels for bofor guns.

"I went out in overalls, with my hair tied back, to this station," said Rapp, recalling she was met at the station by an older man and five younger men," said Rapp.

When the younger men started whistling, the older man stood up for her.

Joining the war effort

Factory girls for their soldier boys

As husbands, sons, brothers, and fathers were called out to fight on the front lines, some women also thrust themselves into unknown territory by joining munitions factories in the 1940s to supply the men with the weapons they needed for battle.

For some women at the time it was their first job. For others, it was a moral decision to leave their homes and families behind to provide for the war effort.

Women quickly learned their ways around the factories to create weapons such as cannons and ammunition while grappling with the fear of what the war may bring. At the same time, however, it also gave women newfound freedom from social constraints at home.

"He said, 'There'll be none of that. She is a member of this crew. You treat her properly.'" Rapp said she nicknamed him Fibber McGee after a character from a radio program.

Rapp said she made friends with four girls from Prince Albert, whose apartment was as busy as "Grand Central Station." The girls would visit the dancehall to meet soldiers training at Hamilton's Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

"You never, ever, did not have a date," said Rapp, laughing. Rapp said one air force trainee from England, Jeff, was a great dancer who

"He never swung me over his head, but we just loved to dance," she said.

Rapp worked in the factory until 1942. At 16, she pretended she was 18 so she could enter the Canadian Women's Army Corps in Ottawa, where she lives today.

She worked in Ottawa as a section sergeant of the directorate of signals.

"The government wanted women in the military, but our mandate was only until 1946, and then you were out" she said.

Veterans speak about what was once taboo

Helen Rapp, a veteran of the Second World War, says that while soldiers are more open to sharing their war-time experiences, the Canadian government can still do more to support veterans.

"The majority of men never talked," said Rapp, who served as a section sergeant at the Directorate of Signals in Ottawa from 1942 to 1946. "When they came home, they got into civilian clothes, and that was the end of it."

She said that was an improvement from the First World War, when soldiers were shot when they couldn't handle the stresses of war. "It was called shell-shock," she said. "They thought, 'You're just putting this on. You don't want to fight.'"

Rapp said that when she visits classes to talk about her experiences, she asks students whether they have relatives who served in the military.

"They say, 'Oh yes, my granddad was, or my uncle, but they never talked.' And they didn't," said Rapp. "They just wanted to forget the bad stuff."

She said veterans are more likely to share their experiences with each other.

"You look at these old fellas and these old gals and ask, 'Where were you posted? What did you do?'" said Rapp. "There's a bond there."

Rapp's husband Jerry Bowen, a veteran of Canada's navy and armed forces, agrees.

"The fellows who were with you at the time have an understanding others don't," said Bowen. "Whenever we get together, we have a good talk."

Rapp said that while Veteran's Affairs Canada is better-equipped to identify and deal with soldiers suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder, recent cuts are putting the department under strain.

"They should never have cut back the services that they did," said Rapp. "They haven't in the (United) States. They cut back every department but Veteran's Affairs, and we were hoping they would do the same here, but (Defence Minister Peter) MacKay decided no."

The Union of Veterans' Affairs Employees predicted in January that the government's plan to cut $226 million from the Veterans Affairs budget in the next two years would result in 500 job cuts by 2015.

"They're short-staffed now," said Rapp. "Where before someone was looking after five or six people, their load is more now."

Rapp said part of the reason she speaks to other Canadians is to ensure they know that veterans should be valued.

"We want to show them that we were there. We made history."

Paying tribute. Bomb Girls actress honoured to salute women like one she portrays in TV series

JESSICA SMITH
Metro in Toronto

Growing up studying history, Charlotte Hegele learned all about the men who fought the Second World War. It was only years later, reading the script of Bomb Girls, that she really learned about the women.

"I think a lot of young people blur history together and they don't realize that there are specific pockets of time where extraordinary things happened," said Hegele. "It's so important that we tell women's stories."

Hegele plays Kate Andrews, a young woman who flees from her abusive father, a tyrannical street preacher, to Toronto, where she works at Victory Munitions.

The main characters on Bomb Girls are inspired by the real Canadian women who worked in munitions factories. They built bombs that could explode with one false move, in factories they believed could be a target for an attack on Canadian soil.

"On World War II, when I was in school, we spoke so much about men," she said. "We, assumed, for whatever reason, that women during war would just be sitting at home

"Some American viewers have been confused because one of the events that happens in the first season is Pearl Harbor, but it doesn't happen until the end. And of, course, Pearl Harbor is the reason the States got involved in the war to begin with... It's nice to know that we're not just telling the women's story, but the Canadian story, because it's unique."

Real factories behind Bomb Girls series

- One of the real factories Victory Munitions is based on is the Defence Industries Limited plant, which built munitions for the Allies and led to the founding of the Town of Ajax. The other was the General Engineering Company of Ontario (GECO) plant in Scarborough.
- The cast is currently shooting season two, set to air in 2013, at the set on Brown's Line in Etobicoke.

- The new season will include Rosie O'Donnell as guest star. She will play "Dottie" in Episode 209.

taking care of the family waiting for their man to come home, waiting for the soldiers to come home, when, in fact, their place in society became pivotal to the success of the Allies."

Bomb Girls shows why the war was pivotal for women, how they went to work when their country needed them to and never turned back.

"It's hard for me to imagine how it really would have been, how it really would have felt to be a woman at that time — but I think that women were just itching to be given equal opportunities as men," Hegele said. "It must have been not just liberating but exciting to be able to do jobs — jobs they actually kept."

For Hegele, telling stories about Canadian history is "an important public service" that she learned from her grandfather.

Dr. Joseph Walmsley was a medical officer who fought in Dieppe. When he returned, he would speak at school Remembrance Day ceremonies.

"He would come in with his medals — it was a very proud moment, to see him come and speak in his full uniform," she said. "I wasn't just proud that he was the speaker, it was because he was so proud. It was a moment for him to give some perspective for young people and understanding of what he actually did."

Meeting her inspiration

Hegele has had the chance to meet some of the real Bomb Girls who are the show's inspiration. Her first time was at the show's premier in Ottawa.

She recalls thinking so much about her character during the filming and then realizing, at the premiere, the impact Bomb Girls would have on the real women who lived that story.

"It was really scary," she said. "At that moment I thought, 'Okay, I really hope we did them justice and we created something that was respectful and honoured their accomplishments and that they would be proud to watch.'"

"The original Bomb Girls seemed moved," she said. "At the time of the war, perhaps, it didn't seem for them that they were doing anything extraordinary because it was what their country needed them to do and they were just doing what they could do. But it's really important for our country to know now about the sacrifices they made."

Nor'easter brings new misery to U.S. East Coast after Sandy

Still in the dark. More than a foot of snow falls on parts of New Jersey, causing further power outages

The New York-New Jersey region woke up to wet snow, hundreds of cancelled flights and more power outages Thursday after a new storm pushed back efforts to recover from a superstorm that left millions powerless and dozens dead last week.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo said losses from Superstorm Sandy in New York state could total $33 billion.

The new storm did not bring a second wave of flooding that some had feared.

"We lost power last week, just got it back for a day or two, and now we lost it again," said John Monticello of Point Pleasant Beach, New Jersey. "Every day it's the same now: Turn on the gas burner for heat. Instant coffee. Use the iPad to find out what's going on in the rest of the world."

But the new storm didn't appear to rouse exhausted residents of the country's most densely populated re-

Valdimir Repnin emerged Thursday morning from his powerless Staten Island home with a snow shovel in his hand, and a question: "Who won? Obama?" he asked.

The region's greatest challenge remains finding emergency housing for tens of thousands of people, in some cases for the long term.

"We are going to have to look at a ground-up redesign," Cuomo said of the power and fuel supply systems. "With power outages, you paralyze the nation, and chaos ensues."

The United States has long been considered among the most conservative countries in the Western world, particularly when it comes to the importance of religion to its citizens and the distaste for the type of social safety net Canadians and Europeans so cherish.

But with the re-election of President Barack Obama this week on the overwhelming support of women, minorities, gays and young Americans, progressives are declaring the dawning of a liberal America.

Same-sex marriage is now the law in several states. A movement towards the decriminalization of marijuana is on the horizon. Wisconsin elected Tammy Baldwin to the U.S. Senate, the first openly gay member of the chamber.

Asian-Americans, in particular.

In 2011, minority births surpassed white births for the first time in the United States, and white men are now a dwindling minority. Indeed, by 2042, the majority of Americans won't be white.

Canadian Forces. Military investigates racially-charged video

A video showing a Canadian Forces officer with his face in brown makeup pretending to be Osama bin Laden's brother is in poor taste but does not reflect the wider military community, Defence Minister Peter MacKay said Thursday.

MacKay issued a statement in response to a video made in 2010 that features an unidentified military member stationed at 14 Wing Greenwood wearing a fake beard and turban, boasting that he worked with the leader of al-Qaida.

The CBC says it was leaked a copy of the video, which shows the officer calling a woman a "silly infidel," saying he drives a taxi and then later yelling at someone off-screen to get away from his car bomb.

MacKay said an investigation into what happened was launched as soon as the Defence Department became aware of the video's existence.

"Two years ago, certain members of the Canadian Forces stationed at CFB Greenwood filmed a video intended for their colleagues that featured inappropriate content and poor taste," MacKay said.

Capt. John Pulchny, a spokesman at 14 Wing Greenwood, said the Canadian Forces National Investigation Service is trying to determine who made the video and whether any military rules were broken. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Arizona gunman gets life in prison for 2011 rampage

Giffords' shooter sentenced. Jared Lee Loughner pleaded guilty; could still receive death penalty from state prosecutors

A man whose 2011 shooting rampage killed six people and wounded 13 others, including Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords, was ordered Thursday to serve seven consecutive life sentences, plus 140 years in federal prison.

Jared Lee Loughner, 24, pleaded guilty under an agreement that guarantees he will spend the rest of his life in prison without the possibility of parole. He avoids a federal death sentence, although state prosecutors could still decide to try him.

Giffords, partially blind, her right arm paralyzed and limp, came face-to-face with Loughner at the sentencing, standing beside her husband as he spoke of her struggles to recover from being shot in the head.

"Her life has been forever changed. Plans she had for our family and her career have been immeasurably altered," said astronaut Mark Kelly, both he and his wife staring at the shooter inside a packed courtroom. "Every day is a continuous struggle to do those things she once was so good at."

One by one, survivors of the attack at a Giffords political event approached the podium to address Loughner, each turning toward him where he sat with his attorneys.

"You took away my life, my love and my reason for living," said Mavanell Stoddard, who was shot three times and cradled her dying husband in her arms as he lay bleeding on the sidewalk after shielding her from the spray of bullets.

Loughner's parents sat nearby, his mother sobbing.

Some victims, including Giffords, welcomed the plea deal as a way to move on. It spared them and their families from having to go through a potentially lengthy and traumatic trial and locks up the defendant for life. Both sides reached the deal after a judge declared that Loughner was able to understand the charges against him. After the shooting, he was diagnosed with schizophrenia and underwent forcible psychotropic drug treatments. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winter Window Replacement

IS REPLACING YOUR WINDOWS DURING THE WINTER A GOOD IDEA?

In most cases the answer is "yes". If you're already thinking of replacing your windows, here are some reasons to do it during the winter.

REDUCING YOUR ENERGY BILLS

Many homeowners start the process of window replacement once they feel the burn of rising heating costs or feel the cold from old, drafty windows.

Heating costs are always rising and poorly insulated windows & doors cost the average consumer a lot more than they realize.

If you're already thinking of making a change, why not take care of it now during the months where it will save YOU the most money?

WINTER CAN BE THE BEST TIME TO INSTALL NEW WINDOWS

Your home's framing has shrunk back to its natural size, so when we install your new windows, you get the tightest, most energy efficient installation.

ENERGY SAVINGS: WHERE DOES YOUR MONEY GO?

The average household energy bill in Ontario is just under $3000.00 a year. This is no small amount of money yet many of us don't understand where it is going.

ADVANTAGES OF WINTER WINDOW REPLACEMENT

Clever shoppers know there are bonuses to buying during the slower seasons and the window & door business is no different.

The best part of a winter installation is the price you will pay.

Because many homeowners wait for spring and summer to replace windows & doors, we are able to do our in-home estimates and installations even faster than usual during the winter months.

Old and drafty windows take their toll on your home's energy efficiency in all four seasons. This can result in a heating loss of up to 40% in winter and up to 50% for cooling loss in summer.

You can't afford not to change those old, drafty windows. Increasing energy costs make waiting a waste of money!

New blacklist aims to deter smartphone theft

Database. Phones to go on an electronic list in Canada in a move to deter thieves, protect personal data

Canada's wireless carriers are targeting smartphone theft by setting up a database that will blacklist lost or stolen phones to prevent them from being re-activated.

The move would also help protect personal data on such devices, the Canadian Wireless Telecommunications Association said Thursday.

Smartphones are worth $600 to $700 and can be resold on the black market, noted association president Bernard Lord.

"With this database, it makes that a lot less attractive because the buyer of the stolen phone will not be able to connect to any network in Canada," Lord said from Ottawa.

"It eliminates the incentive for stealing a device."

The idea is also to reduce the black market value of a smartphone in the eyes of criminals, Lord added.

Once consumers call their wireless carrier to report their smartphone lost or stolen, the device's internal identification number goes on the electronic blacklist.

Lord said even though more smartphones are lost than stolen, law enforcement officials have raised concerns about the issue.

The database for the Canadian wireless industry will be up and running by September 2013 and Canada's carriers will also be contributing to an international database to help prevent smartphone theft, he said.

However, consumers who have their smartphones lost or stolen are "not off the hook" for paying their smartphone contracts.

A website will also be set up by the association to help consumers protect their smartphone data and help protect themselves from theft.

Lord said the smartphone's ID number — called the international mobile electronic number — will be verified by carriers to make sure the device has not been lost or stolen.

The truth comes out in candid WWII doc

The real story.

Documentary uncovers facts behind the Second World War mission dramatized in Quentin Tarantino's action flick Inglourious Basterds

In Quentin Tarantino's Second World War action flick Inglourious Basterds, a ragtag group of Jewish-American soldiers agrees to go on a dangerous mission hunting Nazis behind enemy lines.

The deadly mercenaries are tasked with collecting 100 scalps apiece on their way to take out the Germans' top military leaders.

Not surprisingly for a Tarantino film, it's cartoonishly over the top and not at all historically accurate.

But there was just enough truth there for Canadian director Min Sook Lee to latch onto for The Real Inglourious Basterds, which airs Thursday on History.

She had previously helmed the similar documentary *The Real M*A*S*H* and was asked by History to produce another show with a compelling real-life tale that somehow mirrored the Tarantino film.

"I'm not a Tarantino fan — I hadn't seen the film, I wasn't familiar with the story," she admits in an interview.

"So I had to watch the film and then start looking around for something that was similar in real life — and that took a while."

They landed in deep snow, without skis, and after a long journey through brutal wintry conditions, they reached a small hamlet, where they claimed to be members of a German alpine unit.

"These missions had a high rate of failure, they didn't really know what they were doing, there was a lot of making things up as they went along," says Sook Lee.

Through interviews and dramatic re-enactments, the documentary covers how the men then based themselves in safehouses and began sending information back to the U.S. while posing as Germans.

Winning medal a tough battle

Canadians are a humble bunch. Maybe too humble.

Within a few weeks, Gov. Gen. David Johnston will bestow a final batch of bravery decorations on Canadian troops who fought in southern Afghanistan, but the list likely won't include the nation's highest battle honour: the Victoria Cross.

The notion that Canada will exit its first major shooting war in 60 years without such recognition has some asking what a Canadian soldier must do to win the honour.

The British, the Australians and New Zealand have all given out a handful of VCs for actions in Iraq and Afghanistan, while the United States has awarded 10 Medals of Honour, the American equivalent, in both wars. The lack of Can-

Go it alone or go to an adviser? Depends on your comfort level

Investing. This is the third of a three-part series on getting into the stock market

IN THE MARKET
Bryan Borzykowski
For Metro

It's never been easier to get into the stock market. You can invest online, through an adviser and at your branch. You can buy stocks, mutual funds, exchange-traded funds, fixed-income and more.

Investing is so simple that it can be overwhelming. Where do you start? What should you buy? How much do you need?

Novice investors will likely want to start with an adviser. They understand the market and know which products are the best. It's also their job to make your money grow, which is hard for most people to do on their own.

Some financial planners, such as bank-based advisers, are free, though others can be expensive, depending on what you want them to do. Many charge a flat fee that includes investing and developing a financial plan.

As well, advisers typically invest in mutual funds, which come with a hefty management ratio. Usually, a mutual fund company will take around two per cent of someone's invested assets to cover expenses. If you don't know what you're doing, though, it's worth paying for the advice.

Novice investors will probably want to start with an adviser, says columnist Bryan Borzykowski. ISTOCK

Savvier investors often buy securities online. Every bank has its own web-based brokerage, but there are other firms, such as Qtrade, Interactive Brokers and Questrade, that offer similar services.

Do-it-yourself investors often buy stocks and exchange-traded funds — a basket of stocks that track a specific index — that don't come with the same management fees as mutual funds do. (Stocks don't come with any management costs.) There is a trading fee, but, depending on how often you trade, it can be negligible. Per trade costs range between $6.99 and $29.99 — it depends on the bank and how often you buy and sell — but it's often cheaper than buying mutual funds with an adviser.

Once you figure out how you want to invest and with what products, you need to decide what type of account to use. Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSP) are still the most popular investment account, as you only have to pay tax on the total account balance when you withdraw, likely in retirement.

Tax-Free Savings Accounts, which were introduced in 2009, are giving the RRSP a run for its money. Whatever you invest in a TFSA grows tax-free. While you don't get a tax refund, like you do when you invest in an RRSP, you don't have to pay the CRA when you withdraw.

There are also non-registered accounts that offer preferential tax treatment on capital gains — the difference between what you bought a security for and what it's sold for — and dividends. Most people turn to non-registered accounts after maxing out their RRSP.

See what I mean about choice? It's amazing anyone invests in the stock market at all. But don't get flustered; investing really is easy. Check out your bank's online brokerage account to see what DIY investing has to offer, or talk to a financial adviser for more hands on help.

U.S. retailers run scared of breastfeeding doll

We've got dolls that wet, crawl and talk. We've got dolls with perfect hourglass figures. We've got dolls with swagger. And we've got plenty that come with itty bitty baby bottles.

But it's a breastfeeding doll whose suckling sounds are prompted by sensors sewn into a halter top at the nipples of little girls that caught some flak after hitting the U.S. market.

"I just want the kids to be kids," Bill O'Reilly said on his Fox News show when he learned of the Breast Milk Baby. "And this kind of stuff. We don't need this."

What, exactly, people don't need is unclear to Dennis Lewis, the U.S. representative for Berjuan Toys, a family-owned, 40-year-old doll maker in Spain that can't get the dolls

Open wallets. Canadians will shell out more this holiday season: Survey

A BMO holiday outlook suggests Canadians' spending spirits have improved this season, with the bank projecting an average 15 per cent jump in holiday spending over last Christmas.

The Bank of Montreal's 2012 Holiday Spending Outlook finds that survey respondents plan to spend an average of $1,610 this holiday season, up from $1,397 in 2011.

Shoppers surveyed say they plan to shell out an average of $674 for gifts this year, compared to an average of $583 last year.

The top reasons for spending more are having more people to shop for and being better off financially.

Spending on trips is also projected to increase, while amounts allocated for entertaining were expected to fall from a year ago.

Other analysts weighing in on holiday spending this year also believe Canadians will be more generous with their finances.

A report released last week by Ernst & Young predicted Canadian holiday sales would rise 3.5 per cent over last year, supported by signs of improvement in consumer confidence.

And a study from Deloitte projected Canadians will spend one to two per cent more this holiday season, but an increasing number will check for the best prices online before they head to the mall in a season it expects to be highly price competitive.

THREE WORDS: FOUR MORE YEARS, AND ONE RECORD NUMBER OF RETWEETS called Call The Union. His hilarious plea to the NHL and NHLPA to get a deal done went viral. It features Mooney in a Vancouver Canucks jersey dancing and singing rather poorly. This might be just the jolt the NHL needed. Watch the vid at metronews.ca.

2 Most retweeted tweet, ever. 'Four more years' was the simple yet concise three-word tweet that came out from @BarackObama Tuesday night, along with a picture of Barack and Michelle in a warm embrace. It was retweeted nearly 800,000 times — the highest number ever. President of the United States for another term — and King of the Twittersphere, too.

3 Need help? Call @justinbieber. New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie took to tweeting Justin Bieber to get the word out about Hurricane Sandy New Jersey Relief Fund: '@justinbieber my girls are big fans. Will u help us spread the word about NJReliefFund? For more info: http://tinyurl.com/anufbos #WeWillRebuild.' Biebs, always helping causes, obliged, retweeting to his nearly 30 million followers.

4 Falcons 8-0. The Atlanta Falcons were once one of the laughingstocks of the NFL, but their franchise can now do no wrong. With a star QB in Matt Ryan, they are halfway to a perfect season this year after beating the (hapless) Dallas Cowboys 19-13 on Sunday. Even if they don't go unbeaten, a Super Bowl appearance is definitely in their sights — if they beat da Bears!

5 How to use paparazzi. As Maroon 5 frontman Adam Levine and his girlfriend were leaving a lunch spot in L.A., trailed by paparazzi, he made a makeshift sign encouraging passersby to 'Text Red Cross to 90999' for Hurricane Sandy victims. My genius idea: Every celebrity should do this while being trailed by the paps — have a sign handy to promote a philanthropic cause.

6 Mo bro! I'm proud to be growing a stache for the first time ever — well, since the excitement of facial hair in Grade 8. 7 Extreme Cougar Wives. A program airing later this month on TLC called Extreme Cougar Wives features couples with wide-ranging age differences, including 65-year-old Stephanie, who is in love with 28-year-old Octavio. While this "cougar" thing may have hit its tipping point now, all the power to these women. If men can date way younger women — creepy! — then why not turn the tables?

8 Etiquette expert. If etiquette confuses you, like in my case (I get confused over when not to wear plaid) what better place to turn than Canadian etiquette expert Karen Cleveland. She tackles all things etiquette on her blog — mannersaresexy.com — from the traditional: how to bring your own wine to a restaurant, to the taboo: such as why your company should have toless meetings (as in, sans mobile devices).

9 Trail Blazer, not. A new iPhone app called Trail Blazer that's geared toward kids stars a buffalo who bikes and snowboards past northern Alberta landmarks while avoiding obstacles and collecting coins. Oh, and the game is made by Syncrude, one of Canada's largest producers of oil from Alberta's oil sands, and includes feel-good, pop-up messages about the company. Game over.

Eyewitnessed robbery

Biker gang raids shopping mall

This amazing image shows the dramatic moment a gang of robbers made their escape on motorcycles in a shopping centre.

Six people riding three motorbikes and carrying axes drove into Brent Cross Shopping Centre in north London, England.

Photographer's viewpoint

"It was like a Hollywood film. I would never have imagined someone would do that in a shopping centre. It was like a scene out of James Bond."

Rick Treister, photographer
Treister was on his way to the Apple store in Brent Cross Shopping Centre when he heard the sound of screaming and breaking glass. He managed to get one picture of the robbers as they passed him at full speed.

Details of robbery

- Panic in the shopping mall. Eyewitnesses said the thieves sped into the first floor of the shopping mall and headed for the Fraser Hart high-end jewelry store before smashing windows to get at the valuables on display. Shoppers began to panic as the robbery took place, with many people running for the exits. Some shops would not let customers leave while the incident was underway, witnesses said.

- Bikes abandoned. The motorbikes used in the robbery were found abandoned in Mill Hill, north London, 15 minutes after the robbery took place. Flying Squad detectives from the capital's police department have released footage of the theft taking place, to help in appeals for witnesses and information. So far, no arrests have been made.

- Not an isolated incident. The smash-and-grab incident came a day before a pawnbroker's store was targeted about three kilometres away by another motorbike gang.

Lindsay Lohan plays Liz Taylor in the Lifetime TV movie Liz & Dick, which airs Nov. 25. HANDOUT

CROUSE AND
MARK BRESLIN

Why we still love Liz

Rewind. In celebration of the Lohan-led TV movie Liz & Dick, the Reel Guys pick their faves from the 'greatest movie star of all'

Richard: Mark, I know we'll get to the good Liz Taylor films in a second, but I'd like to start with Boom! a strange movie about a much-married booze hound (Liz wearing Vegas-inspired Kabuki gowns!) and a penniless poet (Dick) who romances her in the final hours of her life. This one fails on virtually every front, except that in its awfulness it has a campy charm, and for the ones who get the joke, great entertainment value.

Mark: Boom? Richard, you are perverses! But I have to admit that even Taylor's better films veer toward camp. Look at Butterfield 8, which I consider her essential mid-career movie. She plays an amoral man-eater who's a borderline prostitute. The movie has the greatest line Liz Taylor ever committed to celluloid, "Mama, face it, I was the slut of all time!" Although the movie is badly dated, it makes a strong case for the return of the negligee.

RC: I guess I like anything with Liz and Burton. Like The V.I.P.s. As if having Liz and Dick on screen wasn't enough star power, The V.I.P.s adds in Orson Welles, Maggie Smith and a host of other early '60s A-listers. The melodramatic story is set on one night at the Heathrow Airport first class lounge. Liz looks amazing in this, but for me the highlight is Welles's sleazy movie producer who'll do anything—including marrying someone he hardly knows—to avoid a whopping tax bill.

MB: It must be some kind of meta-theme in Taylor's work: fat old guys stealing the movie from The Most Beautiful Woman In The World. Burl Ives has the same effect in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof. When he's onscreen, you forget about Taylor, which is quite a feat. Liz is a good little scene chews in this adaptation of Tennessee Williams' mediocre play. Lots of scenes occur in the bedroom, giving her ample opportunity to dress and undress.

RC: Burton was Liz's most famous co-star, but she frequently co-starred with Montgomery Clift, who once said, "She feels like the other half

Synopsis

The Reel Guys will wait to pass judgment on Lindsay Lohan's portrayal of Elizabeth Taylor (opposite Grant Bowler as Richard Burton) in Lifetime's Liz & Dick, but with the TV movie airing this month, we thought we'd take the opportunity to have a look at the real deal; the movies of the lilac-eyed La Liz.

of me." Check out Suddenly Last Summer or A Place in the Sun to see their chemistry.

MB: To my mind, Taylor was just a movie star until she played Martha in Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf. Brilliantly directed and guided by Mike Nichols, she revealed herself to be a great actress as well.

Twilight star a child no Lautner

Transforming in the spotlight. Taylor Lautner talks spending his formative teen years as the world's most famous werewolf

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Taylor Lautner started the Twilight franchise when he was 15 years old, and in the five years since he's become an international celebrity. The end of your teenage years can be awkward enough as is, but being under the media spotlight adds a whole different level of discomfort. "It's amazing how much a 15-year-old to a 20-year-old grows up and matures just regularly. Going through this, it definitely was at an accelerated rate," he says. "[The scrutiny] definitely added to it. It was the part of it that we never predicted."

The first lesson Lautner had to learn was to not just hide from the world. "When something like that happens to you, you tend to [withdraw]," says Lautner, who became a tabloid staple when rumours about him dating Taylor Swift circulated in 2009.

"The worst thing you can do in that situation is just lock yourself up inside your house and not do anything and just be scared. You just have to think about things more and maybe just plan more in advance, but you don't want to change who you are and everything you do just because of it."

Of course, he did have to make some changes because of his fame — like where he spends his free time. "I haven't been to a mall in a while and I haven't been to a theme park in a while, but I figure out how to get into movie theatres," he says. "I do [wear a disguise], but they don't work at all for some reason, and I don't know why. I think I literally just have to put prosthetics on because literally I put a baseball hat on, glasses,

Looking ahead

So where does Lautner go from here? Certainly the Twilight franchise has given him a leg up over other 20-year-old actors, but his first non-franchise entry, last year's Abduction, was a critical and commercial failure. Lautner's plan to avoid another stinker, he says, is to diversify. "I'm looking forward to doing something different for myself and challenging myself," he says. "I don't want to do the same thing over and over again. My goal is to challenge myself to a wide variety of roles and genres of film."

pull the hat down, I look in the mirror and I'm like, 'All right, you are set. You don't look anything like yourself.' And the second I step outside, it's almost like I'm wearing nothing."

Taylor Lautner has come a long way since the first Twilight film. HANDOUT

Michael Sheen. It's not easy being the bad guy, according to actor

Michael Sheen has had a relatively easy schedule in the Twilight series, "flitting in and out" as the villainous Aro, as he puts it, while the rest of the cast has taken on a more strenuous time commitment.

But that doesn't mean he's gotten off easy.

In fact, Sheen takes issue with the old adage that playing a villain is more fun for an actor. "I suppose people think, 'Oh, it's so much more enjoyable to play villains and it's so much more enjoyable to play that kind of thing,'" he says.

"It's hard work. I find it hard work, anyway. Maybe other people find it easier. But it's not something that you just kind of enjoy when you're doing it in the same way. Because if you enjoy it too much yourself, I think people just feel it's self-indulgent. You want the audience to enjoy it, which is the point. You can't enjoy yourself too much. It's work."

One bit he definitely didn't enjoy was the film's grand finale, which takes place on a snow-covered field — something Sheen thought he'd be well-prepared for.

"You think, a bulk of this film is going to be in a forest at night somewhere really cold doing this battle scene in the snow," he remembers.

"So when we were working on the costumes, I thought — bit of experience. I've done this before. I'm going to make sure I've got a really warm costume. Layers and layers of wool and velvet. I was like, 'I'm going to be fine.' And the poor Amazonian girls ... 'I'm sorry, girls. You're just going to have to hold on tight.'"

The actual filming conditions didn't turn out as Sheen expected — though the Louisiana location should've been a tip-off. "I turn up on day one, and it's on a soundstage! It's not in a forest at all," he says.

"So for weeks and weeks and weeks we're in this room with boiling hot lights, fake snow, and the Amazonian girls are like, 'Nyah nyah!'"

Catching up with the Cullens. The actors you've come to know as Edward's family share their post-Twilight plans

The actors who portray the Cullen family in the Twilight series have had the luxury of a steady gig for five years now — something of a rarity for a film actor. But that's all over now. So, who's ready for life after Twilight and who's not? We checked in with the Cullens.

Kellan Lutz: "I've been working on my clothing line for about two years called Abbott + Main, which is another one of my passions — fashion. It's in Nordstrom, it's in Bloomingdale's, it's doing great. Career-wise, I love action movies so I'm producing a couple..."

Nikki Reed: "I just put out an album. Every song is written by my husband and me, and we sing together. We also have a song on the Twilight soundtrack. I did four really cool films this year, two I'm especially proud of — one called Empire State with Liam Hemsworth and ... In Your Eyes, that was written ... by Joss Whedon."

Jackson Rathbone: "I've been focusing on my production company, trying to get projects launched. It's a learning process as a producer just as much as I constantly learn as an actor. I do have hopes to direct. And I always make independent music through my record label, Happy Jack Music."

Ashley Greene: "We're all thankfully working. I'm doing this movie, CBGB, right now that's very independent. Everyone involved is a well-oiled machine. It's just fun..."

Peter Facinelli: "I was doing Nurse Jackie and the Twilight saga literally shooting simultaneously for three or four years, so it's hard even now going to Nurse Jackie and not having another job to go to."

Elizabeth Reaser: "We had careers before this. I know how to manage what that lifestyle is, and you find a way to be creative and be useful in your life when you're not working."

Wu-Tang's RZA takes his interests in a new direction

The Man with the Iron Fists. RZA turns his love of the martial arts film genre into a directing gig with his first feature film

OLIVIA MORROW
Metro World News in New York

There's not much that RZA, more formally known as Bobby Fitzgerald Diggs, can't do. Starting out as the leader of the popular hip-hop group the Wu-Tang Clan, he has since climbed his way up the ladder producing, acting and screenwriting. Now, he adds director to his resume. RZA finally showed his baby, The Man with the Iron Fists, to the world last week, but not before facing a few obstacles, including chronic loneliness and cultural discrepancies, along the way.

RZA said one of the hardest things about making the martial arts film was spending over 150 days in a foreign country without his family. "The different vibe was just a lonely situation really, not only not seeing any blacks in China, but not seeing no whites either," he says. "My wife wasn't able to come over because of the duties of home ... so I was really lonely, everybody else's wives came over, everybody had love ... There was a week where Jamie Chung came in to be Lady Silk and I just started like looking at her like that was my woman (laughs)."

Although he's no stranger to the industry, RZA said he faced many difficulties as a first-time director. "You've got to think, first of all, even having the level of talent, trust me, and to have a mutual trust back and forth was a challenge because I'm not just playing with just any Joe Schmoe. (I've) got some of the best in the world coming to represent with me and you want to protect that," he says.

Having watched all the kung fu classics throughout childhood and even naming his band after the film from the genre — Shaolin and Wu Tang — RZA said he made sure to include cues from his favourite martial arts flicks in his film. "It was very important to pay homage to those things that inspired (me), especially Bruce Lee. I consider Bruce Lee a minor prophet," he says. "In the Qur'an it teaches us that we have major prophets and we have minor prophets, so Abraham, Moses and Jesus would be major. But then you have minor prophets that only live for small periods of time and inspire people in their own small ways. I feel Bruce Lee was like that."

RZA says he paid homage to his favourite martial arts flicks in his new movie. HANDOUT

It took Calvin Harris 18 months to 'make music and have fun again'

New album. Scottish DJ talks about how he walked away from band life and embraced a new genre to find success

ALEKSANDRA

Metro World News

Calvin Harris had one concept in mind when working on 18 months — his latest album, which debuted in the second spot on iTunes in Canada last week — to focus on other singers' voices.

"I just wanted to take the pressure off being a singer and a band guy, which wasn't working out for me at all," the Scottish DJ said while sitting on a couch in his room in a posh Toronto hotel.

ing that Kelis was reluctant because she thought it was a weird song.

Kelis' vocals on the song let other artists know he was interested in collaborations.

Eventually, 18 months became a labour of many voices, including Rihanna, Ellie Goulding and Dizzee Rascal. We Found Love — his mix with R&B sensation Rihanna — became an instant hit.

It topped music charts in 16 countries, including Canada.

Still, Harris said he is happy he stuck with his roots, since most of the featured artists on his album are from the U.K.

"I think it's kind of nice. It means I've not completely watered everything down and got American voices all over the place."

Promoting the new album, Harris has played shows across Canada.

This fall, he played in front of full houses in Calgary, Toronto and London.

Harris' favourite new song to perform at these shows has been Feel So Close — a track on which he sings.

He said that is his pick because it gets the best reception from the fans.

For any possible future albums, Harris does not know if he will continue working with other artists in the same way.

But, one thing is for certain.

"I'm definitely not going to be singing on things," said Harris. "I definitely can't stretch that across a whole album."

Wise words

Listen to the teacher. Webb shares wisdom.

- Music. When asked about the state of contemporary music, Webb is still alert. How about the resurgence of beard-folk and the rise of Bon Iver and Fleet Foxes? "It's cyclic," he says of our return to roots. "The technological pendulum has swung wildly in one direction for such a long time."

Untangling the Webb of a musician

Songwriter. Jimmy Webb has been the man behind numerous hits for well over a generation

JONATHAN DONALDSON
scene@metronews.ca

Although he's not extremely famous, songwriter Jimmy Webb is widely considered to be one of the greatest songwriters of the rock-era.

That's because unlike Lennon/McCartney, Smokey Robinson, or even Carole King, Webb was a pure songwriter whose greatest moments came at the hands of others.

But whether it was Sinatra performing Didn't We, the 5th Dimension doing the delectably light Up, Up and Away or Glen Campbell's own poignant readings of Wichita Lineman and By The Time I Get To Phoenix, Jimmy Webb's uncanny knack for marrying lyric to melody always shines through.

This week, the MFA features two performances from Webb in their Ruth and Carl J. Shapiro Celebrity Lecture series, featuring not only the singer and his piano, but also anecdotes and Q&A.

He's now in his mid-60s and still active on the recording scene: 2010's Just Across the River features career-spanning remakes with vocalists from Lucinda Williams to Jackson Browne and Volume 2 is on its way.

Webb now finds himself in the unique position of being a professor emeritus on the art of songwriting.

He is the chairman of the National Songwriter's Hall of Fame, sits on the ASCAP Board of Directors and his 1999 book Tunesmith is still critically regarded as the best book on songwriting.

"I don't do stand-up, but I do sit-down, because I am at the piano," says Webb on his own performance style, which he has worked hard to continually improve over the years.

"I try to make people

Lighter side

See the lighter side of the musician.

- Mysterious. Although Webb has a grand Southern wit, fans know him best for his often-mysterious lyrics. "I've certainly left the door wide open for all kinds of crazy interpretations," says Webb, recalling past letters from admirers whose interpretations exceeded his fantasies.

- One letter. One wrote that her husband played Wichita Lineman every day, but never understood why the protagonist got electrocuted in the end.

- Another letter had a familiar ring. Another praised MacArthur Park (widely-lam-pooned for its infamous 'cake in the rain' metaphor) as an ode to General MacArthur. "Anyone who might wonder if I've been punished enough for writing 'MacArthur Park,' rest at ease!"

If there's one thing I learned from visiting a gazillion wineries across Australia in record time is that there's more to Down Under than red wines. While they've become synonymous with the dark, spicy goodness that is shiraz; the thick, meaty fruit of Cabernet Sauvignon; and more recently, plump, fruit-forward pinot noir, the Aussies make darn fine white wines too.

I think it was me who said that you really have to wrap your lips around reds before you can fully appreciate whites.

Oz's New World climate is a perfect home for the development of white wines with rich, flowing personalities that, more often than not, massage unique flavour profiles from familiar fruit.

Chardonnay, Sauvignon blanc and riesling are the big three whites in Australia — with pinot grigio making some major in-roads, as is the lesser know viognier.

Yet another expat French varietal from the Rhone Valley, viognier's plush, white pepper character and lightly tropical style is well represented in Yalumba's 2011 Y Series Viognier ($15.99 to $17.99) from South Australia.

It's a great wine to pair with a wide variety of cheeses, along with grand roast poultry dinners, and Thai and Asian cuisine.

Beef stir-fry is an all-time favourite for the family, especially the kids. It's the one way I make sure my kids are getting their protein, vegetables and grains. Be sure not to overcook the vegetables. Use the best quality steak, such as rib eye, sirloin, filet or New York. You can serve this over rice or rice noodles.

1. Sauce: Whisk stock, brown sugar, soy sauce, vinegar, sesame oil, cornstarch, garlic and

Ingredients

- 3/4 cup beef (or chicken) stock
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 2 tbsp low-sodium soy sauce
- 2 tbsp rice vinegar
- 2 tsp sesame oil
- 1 tbsp cornstarch
- 2 tsp finely chopped garlic
- 1 1/2 tsp finely chopped ginger
- 12 oz boneless grilling steak
- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 cups chopped broccoli
- 1 1/2 cups thinly sliced red bell pepper
- 1 1/2 cups snow peas

ginger in a bowl. Set aside.

2. Lightly coat nonstick skillet with cooking spray and place over high heat. When skillet is hot, brown the beef 3 minutes, or until browned but still rare. Remove from the pan, let rest for 5 minutes, then slice thinly.

3. Respray the pan. Heat the vegetable oil, then add the broccoli, red pepper and snow peas. Cook for 3 minutes. Return the beef to the pan. Stir the sauce and add to the pan. Stir-fry for 2 minutes or until the sauce is thickened and bubbly and the beef is done to your liking. Be careful not to overcook.

4. Place on a serving platter and garnish with cilantro or parsley, green onions and cashews (if using).

Simmer Thai flavours

Cooking this Thai Red Curry Chicken in a slow cooker really brings out the flavours.

1. Place the skinless, boneless chicken thigh pieces and red curry paste into the slow cooker; stir until the chicken and paste are well combined.

2. Cover and cook the chicken on high for 2 and a half to 3 hours or on low for 5 to 6 hours or until juices run clear when the chicken is pierced with a fork.

3. Stir the in pieces of eggplant, red pepper strips and coconut

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp Blue Dragon Thai Red Curry Paste
- 2 lbs skinless, boneless chicken thighs, well trimmed and cut into 1-inch/2.5 cm pieces
- 1 Japanese eggplant, cut into quarters lengthwise, then cut into 1-inch/2.5 cm cubes
- 1 medium red bell pepper, cut into thin strips
- 1 can (400 ml) Blue Dragon Coconut Milk
- 1 tbsp chopped fresh cilantro
- 1 tbsp chopped fresh Thai basil leaves
- Steamed Basmati rice
- Lime wedges

milk. Cover and cook everything for another 20 minutes or until the peppers are tender and heated through. Stir in fresh cilantro and basil leaves.

4. Serve the Thai Red Curry Chicken over hot steamed rice and garnish with lime wedge.

Men Without Hats

You can dance if you want to on Tuesday, Nov. 13, when Men Without Hats pops into London. The 1980s new wave band, famous for hits like The Safety Dance and Pop Goes the World, will be playing at Call The Office (216 York St.). The show follows the release of its first album in more than a decade, Love In The Time Of War, earlier this year. Show is 19 plus, tickets are $15 advance/at the door. Pop 'n Chips

Last week, London multimedia artist James Kirkpatrick opened his Pop 'n Chips exhibit at the Michael Gibson Gallery (157 Carling St.), featuring sound sculptures, videos and collage work. By altering the circuitry of electronics, called circuit-bending, Kirkpatrick creates interactive sculptures that also function as musical instruments. Kirkpatrick's work has been shown in galleries across the U.S. and Canada. The exhibit continues to Nov. 24. Photo courtesy of Michael Gibson Gallery.

Journo talks digital

On Tuesday, Nov. 13, long-time CBC Radio journalist Ira Basen will be giving a talk at Western University for the annual Clissold Lecture in Journalism. Basen, known for his award-winning radio documentaries, including the Spin Cycles series, will speak about the future of journalism in the digital age. The talk begins at 5 p.m. in Conron Hall, University College Room 224. Admission is free. Photo courtesy of Paul Benedetti.

Belle Strumbellas

Coming off its first-ever tour of western Canada earlier this year, today Lindsay folk rock band The Strumbellas will be playing at Call The Office (216 York St.). Its debut album, My Father and The Hunter, was released earlier this year to positive reviews, and the band shows no signs of slowing down. After a few more Ontario dates, it'll head straight west again. Show is 19 plus, $6 at the door. Photo provided.

The Crucible

Arthur Miller's much-lauded play The Crucible opens at The ARTS Project (203 Dundas St.) today. The play, set during the 17th century Salem witch trials, was written in reaction to 1950s-era anti-communist McCarthyism practice. The play, which won the 1953 Tony award for Best New Play, remains relevant today. The Crucible runs until Nov. 24. Tickets are $20, available at 519-642-2767. Photo by Echo Gardiner.

Vampyr diaries

Steven Severin, former bassist of Siouxsie and the Banshees, has been busy since his band's demise in 2002. With his Music for Silents series, Severin has now written three scores for classic silent films. He will be at the Wolf Performance Hall (251 Dundas St.) today to perform his score alongside the 1932 film Vampyr, the story of a student of the occult who learns that vampires are all too real. Tickets are $25 at the door. Doors at 7 p.m. Photo courtesy of Maggie Morgue.

Caramel Apple Pie. A modern take on tradition

1. In a large, deep skillet over medium-high heat, toss the apple slices with the vinegar. Cook until the apples are tender, about 10 minutes.
2. Transfer the apples and any juices in the pan to a large bowl. Set aside.
3. Return the skillet to the heat. Add the caramel candies, half-and-half, apple pie spice and salt. Heat, stirring constantly, until melted and smooth.

4. Pour the caramel mixture over the apples and stir until well coated. Spoon the apple-caramel mixture into the graham cracker crust.

5. Sprinkle the top with the cookies, peanuts and chocolate chips. Serve immediately.

NHL negotiations alive in New York

Lockout. Bettman says 'still a lot of work to do' after fourth straight day of talks

The NHL and NHL Players' Association will meet for a fourth straight day in an attempt to salvage a shortened season.

Key negotiators from the league and union, including NHL commissioner Gary Bettman and NHLPA executive director Donald Fehr, met for more than five hours Thursday and indicated talks will continue on Friday.

"I don't really have much to say," said Bettman. "We met with the players' association the last three days and we're planning on meeting again tomorrow. But I'm not going to discuss the negotiations or the

Crunch time

The sides have met for more than 20 hours over the last week, starting with an informal eight-hour session between deputy commissioner Bill Daly and NHLPA special counsel Steve Fehr in Chicago last Saturday.

- Thursday's meeting was viewed by both sides as extremely important.

- Other weighty topics, including revenue sharing and contract rules, were discussed by the NHL and NHLPA earlier in the week and still need to be worked out before the 54-day lockout comes to an end.

substance of what we're talking about.

"I really don't think that would be helpful for the process."

Fehr was similarly tight-lipped.

"All I can say is that we discussed a wide range of topics relating to the issues between us," he said. "I really can't say more than that at this point."

Little is known about exactly where talks stand.

Sources told The Canadian Press that the NHL responded to a pair of union proposals on Thursday. On Wednesday, the NHLPA tabled new offers regarding revenue sharing and the league's "make whole" provision, with the union suggesting a system where the players' share in revenue drops to 50-50 in the third year of the deal.

The "make whole" provision is seen as the fundamental issue left to solve.

With all regular-season games cancelled through Nov. 30, negotiations have reached a critical stage. Ten days will be needed from the time an agreement is struck until the season starts and there is still hope among the parties that a shortened schedule could begin by Dec. 1.

Federer moves on at ATP finals

On an indoor court, Roger Federer can win even when he's not playing his best.

He proved that again Thursday at the ATP finals, beating David Ferrer 6-4, 7-6 (5) and advancing to the semifinals with a group match to spare despite struggling to land his serve and scrambling to stay in the long rallies.

"I've been very successful over the years. Probably won most titles indoors, maybe more than all the other guys combined," said Federer, who called it a natural surface for him. "But that doesn't make me the best this week."

NFL rookie production more than just Luck

Colts rookie Andrew Luck falls back to pass against the Dolphins last Sunday in Indianapolis. Luck's 433 yards passing in the game set a single-game NFL record for a rookie. GREGORY SHAMUS/GETTY IMAGES FILE

As good as Andrew Luck and Robert Griffin III have been, look beyond the first-year quarterbacks making strong first impressions and check out other NFL rookies delivering dynamic performances.

It's a deep class, from Tampa Bay's Doug Martin, Cleveland's Trent Richardson and Griffin's Redskins teammate Alfred Morris at running back, to the Rams' Chris Givens and Titans' Kendall Wright at wide receiver, to Minnesota's Matt Kalil and Cleveland's Mitchell Schwartz on the offensive line, to Dallas's Morris Claiborne and New England's trio of Chandler

Jones, Dont'a Hightower and Tavon Wilson on defence.

"By and large, this is an outstanding group of players. What they've done halfway into the season—I think you're safe to say it is one of the best groups of rookies ever," said former Dallas Cowboys GM and NFL draft consultant Gil Brandt.

Heading into the game between Luck's Indianapolis Colts and the Jacksonville Jaguars on Thursday night, there were 503 games started by first-year players, the highest total through Week 9 since at least 1991, according to STATS LLC.

Numbers game

NFL rookies are producing like never before: STATS LLC says the 10,089 yards passing by freshmen so far leads the way for any year since the 1970 AFL-NFL merger.

- This class's 5,716 yards rushing is the most through Week 9 since the merger except for the strike year of 1987, when replacement players inflated the stats.

How hockey assists are helping turn up the Heat

Roundball revolution.

Canada's pastime has helped rev up offence of defending champs

There's nary a pair of skates visible in the Miami Heat locker-room, no bucket of pucks in the practice facility and no Zamboni following the team around, either.

Still, there's at least one hockey principle that's in the mind of the reigning NBA champions so far this season.

With emphasis on ball movement, the Heat are currently into what's known as "hockey assists" — essentially, the pass that sets up the score.

It's not an NBA statistic, but Heat coach Erik Spoelstra is working it into his team's repertoire regardless.

"If anything, it's a compliment to the game of hockey," Heat centre Joel Anthony said. "We're recognizing the different types of ways they reward players for making the extra pass. Hockey acknowledges it

"Making the pass to the guy who makes the pass is just as valuable."

Miami Heat forward Chris Bosh talks about how his team values the concept of the second assist a lot more. There's no stat for it in basketball, but we still acknowledge that."

Anthony would seem to be the resident Miami expert in this field.

After all, he hails from Montreal.

"That extra pass, it means a lot for us," Anthony said.

Miami's ball movement this season is beyond statistically impressive. In their four wins so far, the Heat have 109 assists against only 43 turnovers. Even with their lone loss taken into account, the Heat assist-to-turnover ratio of 1.98-to-1 led the NBA entering Thursday's games.

As a team, Miami reached the 25-assist mark only 12 times in 66 regular-season games last season. This year, the Heat have gotten there four times in five games.

"It's all about getting somebody the better shot," Dwyane Wade said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

East semifinal

Edmonton (7-11) at Toronto (9-9), Sunday, 1 p.m. (TSN)

Backroom intrigue is the last thing the Edmonton Eskimos need right now, but they stirred it up with the firing of GM Eric Tillman earlier this week.

Rumours persist that Tillman is now destined for Toronto and a similar role with the Argos, triggering all kinds of denials from Hogtown, where Tillman traded Eskis star quarterback Ricky Ray last off-season. The swap not only created controversy in Edmonton but a huge credibility gap for the league should Tillman be reunited with Ray in T.O.

Since the crossover format's introduction in 1996, it is just the seventh time a team has headed to the other division for a CFL semifinal, and history is not on Edmonton's side. Only B.C. in 2009 advanced to the East Division final.

This Sunday's semifinal favours the Argos not only for Ray's presence at the helm, but East Division most outstanding player candidate Chad Owens will likely make an impact on special teams and offence.

To succeed, Edmonton will need a dominant performance from Fred Stamps, who recovered from an early season slump to finish second among CFL receivers.

Season series: The Eskis beat the Argos both times the teams met in 2012, but much has changed since those encounters. Not only has Ray returned to all-star form, Edmonton's muddled QB situation has left everyone second-guessing whether they should start veteran Kerry Joseph or youngster Matt Nichols. Steven Jyles, acquired in the Ray swap, is an afterthought.

West semifinal

Saskatchewan (8-10) at Calgary (12-6), Sunday, 4:30 p.m. (TSN)

The Calgary Stampeders are the CFL's hottest team, but you can't help but think they get a chill when pondering Sunday's opponent. Despite a four-game win streak, history suggests almost anything can happen when the Roughriders visit McMahon Stadium.

Since winning the 2008 Grey Cup, Calgary has lost two West finals to Saskatchewan and thumped 33-19 in the West semifinal last fall in Edmonton. The Stamps have suffered playoff losses in each of their last four post-season encounters with the Riders, dating back to 2007.

Additionally, Saskatchewan minimizes Calgary's home-field advantage more than any other team as thousands of Rider fans are expected to turn up at McMahon Stadium, as usual.

The Riders locked down practice early this week, leaving media miffed and conspiracy theorists suggesting the coaching staff has cooked up something special to upset the Stamps.

The biggest shock may have come days before the opening kickoff, when the Stamps chose Drew Tate as their starting quarterback ahead of Kevin Glenn, who led the team most of the year as Tate rehabbed a shoulder injury.

Season series: The Roughriders and Stampeders met three times, with Calgary taking two of three games. The Stamps won the first two, highlighted by a stunning comeback overtime win in Week 4 that handed the Riders their first loss of the year. However, the Riders claimed the final regular-season encounter. Pick: Calgary by 2.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

Get help from someone who is more worldly-wise than you are. You may think you can get things done alone but life will be easier if you have someone to handle negotiations and read the small print that you tend to ignore.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Do what you feel is right and ignore those who disagree with you. You tend to do that anyway, but today there really is no time for discussion. Follow your muse wherever it chooses to lead you.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

The right things seem to be happening at just the right time and today's Venus-Jupiter link will certainly bring good news concerning a partnership or relationship. One-to-one relationships are under excellent stars.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You have never been one to put dollars and cents above other things but over the next few days you must focus more on your financial situation. Could you be earning more? Yes. Should you be spending less. Double yes.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Your heart will rule your head today and that will lead to some seriously fun times. Friendships and social activities must come first, at least for a while. Contacts you make now will bring long-term benefits.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There are times when it all seems to come together, and this is one of them. Both at home and at work, things will fall into place with no input from you, and that's nice. All you have to do is enjoy them.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

This is potentially one of the best days of the year as your ruler Venus, currently in your sign, links with luck planet Jupiter. Make a wish and expect it to come true, because it most likely will. Go on, ask for something outrageous.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

It's time to get serious about your aims and ambitions. Something you visualize over the next few days is potentially more than just an idle daydream. Handled the right way, it could be your future — and that future is bright.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may be tempted to say what you think people want to hear but that would be a mistake. The planets urge you to be honest, even if it means hurting a loved one's feelings. They'll thank you for it one day.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may be tempted to be nice, even if people are not nice to you. Someone in a position of authority thinks you are ready for bigger and better things, and if your manner is positive, a promotion is likely.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You may or may not be on the move over the next few days but even if you stay close to home, you will certainly be looking at the world in a different way. You have never been one to follow the herd.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Today's Venus-Jupiter link will emphasize the generous side of your nature, which is rarely far from the surface. Do what you can for people in need but don't bankrupt yourself in the process — that won't help them or you. SALLY BROMPTON
